The President of Stanford University Talks of the Opening of That Great School.

DAVID STARR JORDAN.

President David Starr Jordan, of the State University, was in the city yesterday, and lectured last evening before the Contemporary Club. In conversation with a Journal reporter at the close of his lecture, he said, in answer to an inquiry, that after the commencement of the State University he would go to California to the Leland Stanford University, of which he has been chosen president, and acquaint himself with the surroundings.

"I shall," said he, "probably go there for a week or so in May, but I am not quite certain. I shall go there to remain permanently on the 20th of June." "With how many teachers will you be-

"With about fifteen, and will open in October, meeting the demands of students as well as we can. I think, although it is a mere guess, that we shall open with 200 or 250 students. I have not announced the names of any teachers yet, notwithstanding the rumors that are going about. I shall get those that are recognized as among the very best. These will be classed as provery best. These will be classed as professors, associate professors and assistant professors, and the salaries graduated from $4,000 upward. There will only be a few professors chosen at first. We shall attempt to provide for all the graduate students who come, but the majority will doubtless be freshmen. Ladies will be admitted on the same terms as men. The general standard of admission, for the present will be the same as for the Unipresent, will be the same as for the University of California, which is the chief school on the Pacific coast. The faculty, for the most part, will be men from thirty to forty years old. The full protessorships will be partly filled by promoting the younger men and by bringing in celebrated men when we get fairly under way. There will be the fullest possible development of engineering work in all its branches, civil. mechanical and electric. A feature of the institution will be that of non-resident lecturers. Any distinguished man from any country who can be induced, for any reasonable sum, to come, is likely to receive a call. This will be made prominent in the work of the university, and every year there will be one or more series of lectures of this character."

"When were you last in California?" "In 1880, as agent of the United States Census Bureau. I had charge of the marine industries of the Pacific coast, and was there a year." "I suppose it was then that you met Sen-ator Stanford?"

"No," answered the Doctor, smiling: "I never met Senator Stanford until last Sunday, and the proposition involving the presidency of the university was made within ten minutes after I firstsaw him." "How did it come about?" "I suppose it might be fair to say that it came on the recommendation of President White and others."

"Will there be any great flourish at the opening of the institution?"

"None at all," said the Doctor, positively.

"The opening will be modest and without any special advertising. During the first few years there will be spent only such sums as can be effectively used. The large income will be drawn on as economically as though the endowment were no greater than that of other institutions of learning. It is intended that this shall be a place for students who are not rich, young men of small means. It is not the intention to pay large sums for inferior service simply because the institution has plenty of money. Part of the faculty will be announced as soon as I have time to communicate with Mr. Stanford."

The reporter made an ineffectual attempt to get an answer to the question whether Indiana was likely to lose any other of her educators through the Stanford University, and hinted to the Doctor one or two names that might be chosen. The only reply received was that no one had any authority to announce any person as yet.

THE BANKERS BANQUETED

After Forming a State Association the Men of Wealth Enjoy Themselves.

Officers Elected and Another Meeting Arranged for August-Speeches at the Banquet-An Organization with a Promising Future.

There were forty-four banks represented at the meeting at the Grand Hotel yesterday morning to organize a State bankers' association. Dr. Baker, whose home is in this city, but whose bank is in Anderson, was chosen temporary chairman and R. E. Niven, of Thorntown, secretary. The following officers were then elected to serve one year: President, Thomas W. Woollen, of Franklin; vice-president, Dr. H. D. Ressoner, of Marion; secretary, R. E. Niven, of Thorntown; treasurer, E. B. Porter, of Indianapolis; executive committee, C. S. Andrews, of Brazil; N. T. De Pauw, New Albany; Charles J. Doherty, Indianapolis; A. F. Ramsey, Crawfordsville; B. Baker,

The name selected for the organization was the Indiana Bankers' Association. It was decided that banks should constitute the membership and while all their officers and employes may attend the meetings, the institutions shall each have but one delegate. The membership fee was fixed at $3 for banks having a capital stock of less than $100,000 and $5 for those having a capital stock of over $100,000. After some discussion it was decided that the next regular meeting should be held the second Tuesday in June, 1892, and the executive committee was empowered to se-lect the place. That committee was, upon motion, instructed to call a special meeting for next June, it being deemed unwise to hold no sessions at all between now and the regular convention next year. There was more discussion on the subject and the motion was reconsidered and the time for the special meeting left to the discretion of the executive committee. This action was likewise reconsidered, and August finally fixed upon as the month in which to hold the special meeting, the date to be named by the executive committee. The association then adjourned

The visiting bankers made a brief stay of it but had a good time while they were here. The organization of the association and arranging for future meetings occupied about two hours, and the a sernoon was spent visiting with the local bankers. Last evening was pleasantly occupied in discussing a banquet at the Grand Hotel, which was in the nature of a reminder that Indianapolis business men could entertain their fellow-Hoosiers in as handsome style, and at as short men could entertain their fellow-Hoosiers in as handsome style, and at as short notice as the merchants of any other city in the country. The banquet put the finishing touches upon a movement which has resulted in the organization of what bids fair to be one of the most successful associations of the State. Shortly after 9 o'clock some sixty gentlemen seated themselves in the dining-room of the Grand, the tables being arranged in U-shape and decorated with beautiful stands of roses. The menu comprised, among other and decorated with beautiful stands of roses. The menu comprised, among other delicacies, terrapin and quail. Panden's orchestra played while the supper was in progress. When eigars had been reached, President Tanner, of the Board of Trade, who officiated as toastmaster, and did it in admirable style, too, rapped for attention, and, in a few graceful words, told the visiting bankers that Indiauapolis was as proud of the State as the State was of Indianapolis, which city was delighted to have within its limits the representatives of so many of Indiana's thriving communities. He extended the warmest sort of welcome on behalf of the business men here, and said it was the best thing in the world for them to organize and thus meet socially as well as in a business way, once a year or more. "There is one thing," said he in conclusion, "upon which we all agree, and it is better to refer to the things we agree upon rather than to those we do not, and that is Indiana, Let us drink a coldwater toast to our State: water toast to our State:

The winds of heaven never fanned, The circling sunlight never span ned The borders of a fairer land Than our own Indiana."

There was much applause, and the toast was disposed of, after which Mr. Tanner was disposed of, after which Mr. Tanner called upon Secretary of State Matthews to respond to it. Mr. Matthews said that, for two days past, the hotel had been made more beautiful by the crimson radiance of the bankers' presence. He had longed to be a banker. with a pocket full of money and one of those red badges, and had at last attained the latter portion of his desire. It was to the bankers, he claimed, that Indiana was largely indebted for the prominent position she occupies among the other States of the Union, and he felicitated them upon the fact, saying that Indiana was proud of her bankers and he hoped they would all return to Indianapolis to spend many more pleasant evenings.

D. P. Erwin was summoned to the front by Mr. Tanner with a complimentary allusion to his prominence as a business man. He said he was about overcome at the gratuitous advertising, which usually cost a great deal, and contented himself with expressing the hope that this banquet was but the first of a series of similar occur-

C. S. Andrews, of Brazil, escaped a speech by telling a story, but Col. Eli Lilly faced the music bravely and entertained the banqueters with a few crisp remarks rela-"Looking back over my business life of forty years and upwards," said the Colonel, "I cannot recollect a time when I was not glad to see a banker and to take him cordially and confidentially by the hand. I am glad to see you collectively—not so glad, perhaps, as in times gone by, I have been to see an individual banker, but still very, very glad. Our business men are not given enough to the social amenities of life, and I hope you will become warm friends. We are proud of our city and our bankers, and I hope your association will go on year after year increasing in influence and numtive to his kindly relations with bankers. after year increasing in influence and num-

District Attorney Smiley N. Chambers made the best speech of the evening, saying he had always managed to maintain more or less friendly relations with bankers. "There is no class of men," said he, "who are more intimately related to the interests of the people of both large and small wealth than the bankers. And what may Indiana not become through the medium of her bankers. Her resources are yet to a large extent to be developed and the bankers can do more to aid in this all-important work than any other class. Does this thought not suggest to you, gentlemen, that you can build up this already great State? No class of men can do this as well as you. Politicians cannot do it. They distract the people. The farmer cannot organize sufficiently to do it. The laboring man has his individual interests to guard. But your interests reach to all parts of the State. You possess the wealth and intelligence, and, I believe, the disposition to to do this great work. May the organization of this association result in bringing this about." Mr. Chambers's eulogy of Indiana and his enthusiastic utterances reall-important work than any other class. diana and his enthusiastic utterances regarding its possibilities were warmly ap-

Short speeches were made by V. T. Malott, C. C. Foster, I. S. Gordon, E. B. Porter, F. A. W. Davis and M. B. Wilson, of this city, R. E. Niven, of Thorntown, Dr. Baker, of Anderson, and others, and shortly after 11 o'clock the banquet concluded with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne," The reception committee in charge of the affair consisted of the following-named gentlemen: C. C. Foster, George G. Tanner, M. B. Wilson, A. P. Hendrickson, S. N. Chambers, D. P. Erwin and I. S. Gordon.

AN EASTER OPENING.

A Dry-Goods House Takes Advantage of the Season to Introduce Many Novelties.

The Easter opening at the New York Store is indeed a beautiful innovation, being entirely different from all Easter openings that have ever been held in this city. The first thing to attract the attention of the passer-by is an enormous egg in one of the great show windows, larger by far than the roc's egg described by Sindbad, the sailor, in the "Arabian Nights." This egg. made of beautifully-colored silks and garlanded with flowers, shows emerging from arift in its silken shell a doll fairy with silver wings and golden hair. The opening pertains only to the second floor of this great store, and the millinery department is the first feature that attracts the attention of the visitor. He sees a handsome lady with admirable pose of head and a singularly fine Greek profile seated in a chair. Her self-possession seemed somewhat remarkable, and inquiry brought out the fact that she was merely a toy figure made of wax. The pillars in this department are decorated with artificial flowers, with a profuseness that impresses all the lady visitors. The display of spring bonnets and hats is enormous, and of the greatest variety and brilliancy. Here, also, is a great showing in a special feature, something entirely new, a department of infant underwear, in which everything is for the babies. Here, also, is the department of ladies' suits, cloaks, wraps and jackets, with all the newest things from the best Parisian artists. Further along are china and other rich shawls, and ladies' silk waists, which will be much worn this year. Here is also the boys' clothing department, a new feature, and which formed one of the most attractive spots in the opening. The attendance of visitors has been gratifyingly large, and the Easter opening may be voted in every way a success.

The Governor's Instructions Disregarded. No attention is being paid by the Auditor and Treasurer of State to the Governor's notice that no warrants can legally be drawn in favor of the trustees of the ben-evolent astitutions whom he has refused to commission. The matter is expected to given a one and one-third rate. The Grand | get into the courts very soon.

SCOTTISH RITE ELOQUENCE

Last Evening's Banquet a Memorable Occasion in the History of the Order.

Over Four Hundred at the Festal Board-Judge Elliott's Impressive Response to the Toast "Our State"-The Other Speeches.

The annual convocation of the Scottish Rite Masons of Indiana continued its work yesterday, conferring the grades of Saraiah Council, Princes of Jerusalem, fifteenth and sixteenth degrees, in the afternoon, upon a class of nineteen candidates. The work was in charge of Charles L. Hutchinson, S. P. G. M., assisted by a corps of trained and experienced officers, and was complete and excellent in all its details. This series of degress concludes with what is to many the most interesting part of the convocation-the annual banquet. Nor is it the good things substantial that are provided that constitutes the attraction, but the after-dinner speeches. In such a representative body of citizens, an occasion of this sort serves to bring out the best talkers in Indiana, and last evening's banquet was no exception to the rule. Over four hundred gentlemen were participants in the joyous occasion, and the banquet was universally commended as one of the most complete in quality and service ever given in the grand banquet hall. The usual accompaniments of wit and eloquence were not lacking. Charles L. Hutchinson, 32°; of this city, proved a most capable toastmaster. After Rev. J. S. Jenckes, 32°, had invoked the Grand Architect of the universe, W. L. Taylor, 320, welcomed the visitors in an entertaining speech, recalling the fact that from a modest beginning, with seven members, in November, in 1863, the A. A. Scottish Rite in this State has grown to a membership of 1,150. Of the original seven members six are living, Caleb B. Smith, Secretary of the Interior under resident Lincoln, being the one who is dead. Mr. Taylor related several amusing incidents in connection with the growth of Judge Byron K. Elliott, 33°, responded to the toast "Our State" in an impressive speech. In eloquent words he pictured the boundless resources and marvelous development of Indiana, from a primitive frontier State to one of the foremost, industrially and intellectually. "The Posey county of hoop-poles and pumpkins," said he, "has become the most productive county, in proportion to acreage, in the whole Union. In every line of growth and civilization Indiana has kept pace with the front rank. In the emancipation of women from the feudal shackles of the English common law, the statutes of Indiana made the first and most radical movement; and the women of Indiana have led in every form of intellectual and social advancement. of intellectual and social advancement. The Propyleum of this city is a monument to their energy, courage and ability."

Judge Elliott paid a glowing tribute to the literary ability of Indianians—Lew Wallace, James Whitcomb Riley and others whose creations have immortalized themselves and their native State, and gracefully referred to Judges Niblack and Zollars, who were present, as among those whose judicial opinions have contributed substantially to jurisprudence. Jordan and Coulter, in science, and Harvey and others in medicine, he said, have stood in the front rank and have done noble work for science and mankind. In conclusion, the speaker eloquently referred to the patriotic soldiers of Indiana who so grandly fought in the war for the Union.

Mortimer Nye, 33°, of La Porte, eulogized "Freemasonry—the most ancient and honorable association ever formed by man, and the one that has, both directly and indirectly, accomplished most for the improvement of the moral man." He said that, next to religion, it has most inspired men in favor of the good and the true. It has protected the weak and the fatherless, and has been at all times a pillar of strength to truth and right. Mr. Nye was frequently interrupted by the applause of the banqueters. R. W. Montross, 32°, of De Witt Clinton Consistory, Grand Rapids, Mich., responded to the toast "Our Visitors," in a few happy words. Mr. Montross has been a regular visitor to this consistory for the past fifteen years, and this time he brought half a dozen Michigan friends to see the

J. B. Harper, of Fort Wayne, spoke appropriately of "The Fort Wayne Bodies," his response being warmly applauded.

Hon. Harry H. Francis, State Senator, and editor of the Michigan City Appeal, reand editor of the Michigan City Appeal, replied in a witty and entertaining way to the toast of "The Candidates," and in a pleasant and fitting manner closed the toasts of the evening. His apology for the brevity of his remarks was to the effect that he, in common with the rest of the candidates, were tired, weary and sore, and expected to be a great deal more so before they got through they got through.

The work of the day closed with the conferring of the Rose Croix degrees, 170 and 180, upon some thirty candidates. Judge

Elliott was the leader in the work, a position requiring a high degree of ability, and which the Judge ably filled.

The effectiveness of the work is greatly enhanced this year by the new costumes, used now for the first time. They are very rich in material, and historically exact. For some years the Rite has felt the necessity of these accessories to its work, and now the members feel that in appearance as well as in performance, the Indianapolis bodies are second to none. To-day the Consistory degrees, up to the 32° will be conferred upon about forty candidates. This will close the work of the annual convocation.

ALL THE APPLICANTS FAILED.

Recent Civil-Service Examination in Stenography Has to Be Gone Over Again.

At the special examination, last month. for a stenographer in the railway mail service, none of the dozen applicants passed. Yesterday S. G. Woodward, secretary of the postal board, received a letter from President Lyman, of the Civil-service Commission, reciting the difficulty experienced in filling vacancies in the stenographic department of the railway mail service, and stating that there would be an examination in this city April 30, at which those who have previously filed applications may be examined. All male citizens of the United States between the ages of 18 and 35 years are eligible and application blanks and instructions may be obtained by writing to the Civil-service Commission, Washington, D. C. The railway mail clerk examination will have to be taken as a basis and a practical test in stenography will be given as a supplementary examination. The salary at first will be $840 a year. April 30 is the date for the regular examination of applicants for positions as departmental clerks, copyists, postoffice inspectors and pension examiners.

Knocked Down and Robbed Dennis Tullity, proprietor of a saloon on the corner of South and West streets, was assaulted and robbed last night just after closing his place at 11 o'clock. As he was leaving the premises by a dark side hallway, a tall man stopped him, and asked him to go back and give him a drink. Turning partially around he was struck with some blunt instrument on the back of the head and felled to the floor. His assailant then rifled his pockets, securing $30 and his revolver. The wound was a long, painful one, cutting through the scalp. He managed to rise after a few minutes and was taken to Dr. Manker's office, where the wound was dressed. The Doctor expressed some fear of concussion of the brain, or of some injury to the skull.

The police were notified but could gain no description that would assist them in discovering the assailant.

The Sydenham Society's Commencement The Sydenham Society of the Medical College of Indiana will hold its twentieth annual commencement next Monday night at the Y. M. C. A. Hall. The programme includes a senior address by A. N. Mackey, a junior address by F. T. Rudy, president's address by E. P. Farris and the alumni address by Dr. A. W. Brayton. The musical numbers will be furnished by Miss M. Diener, Mr. John Geiger, Mr. W. C. Mannfeld and Miss May Johnson.

LABOR MATTERS QUIET.

The Painters All at Work Again-Awaiting Secretary McGuire's Coming.

The labor situation was unusually quiet yesterday. No meetings were held except the regular ones at Masonic Hall. The settlement of the planing-mill controversy was accepted in good spirit by the men. who, while they did not gain all they had hoped for, recognized that it was the best they could do under the circumstances. The painters have all gone to work for their former employers, and it is probable no further effort will this season be made to push the union forward for more exclusive recognition. The hours and schedule arranged by the committee on arbitration will stand, but is not expected to escape violation. While the painters will not refuse to work with non-union men of other trades, it is probable they will not acqui-esce altogether in working with non-union

The arrival of P. J. McGuire, the secretary of the Carpenters' Brotherhood, is expected every day. His advice and counsel will have great weight in the further effort at arbitration.

Entertainment at Plymouth Church. To the efforts of Miss Janet Payne and Miss Daisy Steele and the assistance of several friends commendation is due for providing so excellent a programme as was given at Plymouth Church last evening. The young ladies have been interested in several poor families, and to raise a fund to be able to give them some of the necessaries of life the concert was planned, and the generous response will enable them to render material aid. The entertainment, which was listened to by a very appreciative audience, included: Flute solo, "Heimweh," Bott, by Mr. Arthur Smith; baritone solo, selection from "Tannhauser," Mr. Henry Severin: violoncello solo, Mr. Armin Reck-Severin; violoncello solo, Mr. Armin Recker; soprano solo, "The Song that Reached my Heart." Jordan, Miss Edna Burks; recitation, "Ginevra," Susan Coolidge, Miss Emily S. Bingham; contralto solo, "Open thy Lattice," Gregh, with mandolin obligato, Mrs. Leon Bailey; violoncello solo, Mr. Armin Recker; piano solo, "Polka de la Reine," Raff, by Miss Maggie Anderson.

State Bank Examiner. Auditor of State Henderson, with the approval of the Governor, as the law requires. has appointed Senator Harry Francis, of Michigan City, State Bank Examiner. Francis will not enter on his duties for some time. He is to succeed J. R. Henry, of Gosport.

Events to Occur. The Ladies' Industrial Home Society will meet at the Denison parlors, at 2:30 P. M. today, for reorganization. The sixth section of the Free Kinder-garten and Children's Aid Society will give an afternoon reception and evening dance at the Propyleum, next Wednesday, to which the public is invited.

The entertainment of music and magic that pleased a large audience at Y. M. C. A. Hall Tuesday night will be repeated there this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. The time is fixed at that hour to enable school children to attend.

The complimentary concert to be given Mrs. Julia Morgan Cole at Plymouth Church April 10 will be sustained by some of the best musicians in the city. Mrs. Cole will have numbers that will give the best test of that musical ability which the public has so much enjoyed.

The Young Women's Christian Temperance Union will give "The Queen of Fame," with literary features, Monday evening at Room 16, When Block, Joan D'Arc. Martha Washington, Jenny Lind and other illustrious women will be personated. Refreshments will be served from 9 to 10 o'clock.
